Man with past couldn’t keep on cheating death

By Kim Barker
Tribune staff reporter

GREENCASTLE, Ind.—Richard Hauff could tell a story. Like how gangsters once pistol-whipped him, or how he hijacked an Army plane from Korea to America, or how he was Sicilian and “connected” in Chicago.

Around here, everyone liked Hauff. Nobody really believed him.

But when he died in a hail of bullets Feb. 25 in his Black Angus steakhouse, people started to wonder. They speculated about a “mob hit,” remembered how Hauff always talked about “playing the numbers.”

Richard Hauff wasn’t exactly whom he pretended to be. But he was much closer than most people here ever thought—especially, it turns out, the playboy with a capital “P.” Richard Hauff died as part of a lovers’ triangle, police say.

“He was a case,” said Dave Wood, one of his closest friends in Greencastle. “He always had a line going on something.”

Dave Wood, one of Richard Hauff's closest friends in Greencastle, Ind.
HAUFF:

Some people believed; some didn’t care

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

But he was Iranian. His parents were killed in World War II, and American soldiers found him in the hills of Iran, according to old articles in the Tribune and other papers.

Adopted by a soldier

One soldier, Franklin Hauff, brought the 6-year-old boy home to his wife in Arlington Heights and adopted him.

Hauff liked to tell people he was a football star, a boxing champion.

But he was a ‘teens’ boy, a boxing champion, winning scholarships and playing cool under pressure, according to yellowed newspaper clippings.

Hauff liked to tell people that mobsters tried to kill him.

And two thugs almost did. They pounded him over the head with a pistol butt, while he was on a date with the estranged wife of a chief deputy of the chief of the Chicago crime syndicate, newspapers said. Police surmised that the thugs wanted Hauff to pay his debts.

As a young man, Hauff didn’t drink, didn’t smoke. He told one newspaper that he always operated legally, but not ethically. He was no saint, he said.

"Yes, I’m a playboy," he told the newspaper. "I’m as bad a playboy as can be."

Hauff bought a country club in 1969, with the help of the younger brother of Nick Dean, an Al Capone racketeer deported to Argentina. Turns out, the club had two sets of books. It in Indiana, he told the college newspaper that he owned two restaurants in Boca Raton for 20 years.

Hauff came to Indiana for family in the mid-90s, following his parents and his sister. He worked at a cook in a truck stop. He sold liquor at two package stores. He became a chef at the Walden Inn, the fanciest place in town, where he was known for his biscuits. He helped care for his ailing mother, after his father died.

Hauff’s sister and her husband, Ken Bode, then a journalism professor at DePauw, lived in a hulking pink brick home on a hill overlooking a sprawling of 24 rooms that is listed on the National Registry of Historical Places. Bode was hired as the dean of the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University.

And two years ago, the house was sold to Paul and Jean Dell, a couple from Indianapolis who refurbished old homes and sold them for profit, records show.

He came with the house

Friends and neighbors say Hauff came with the house. He lived in a small apartment.

A year ago, Hauff persuaded the Dells to buy Hathaway’s and enter the restaurant business, friends say. The Dells were the owners; Hauff was the general manager.

By October, the problems had started. Mostly over money, friends and neighbors say.

Hauff opened his own restaurant, the Black Angus steakhouse, although he still cooked over at Hathaway’s on occasion.

In February, he stopped working anywhere for a couple of weeks. His mother died, and two days later, he was hospitalized with congestive heart failure and pneumonia, said David Bray, his accountant.

Once released from the hospital, Hauff reopened the Black Angus, and started cooking again at Hathaway’s. At the end of that week, on Feb. 23, the landlord of Hathaway’s sued the Dells, because they hadn’t paid their rent since December, court records show.

The next night, everything blew up. Court records and interviews give the following account of that stormy Saturday night:

Hauff was cooking at Hathaway’s but left abruptly at 9 p.m., driving the few blocks to the Black Angus.

After Jean Dell refused to return his black bag, Hauff returned to Hathaway’s. They fought. He left with his bag. Jean Dell made a phone call, and her husband showed up at the restaurant.

At some point that day, Jean Dell called home, and the call was recorded on the answering machine. Jean Dell complained about how Hauff treated her. "He’s strong," she told her husband, adding that he shouldn’t drink too much.

"I’m strong," he replied, according to the police statement of probable cause. "I’m going to kill the little son of a bitch."

Police later found a note that appeared to be from Paul Dell to his wife, "The pain of sharing you with Richard is more than I can express," the note said.

Thunderguns and gunfire

A storm roiled Greencastle that night, thundering through town, waking people up, knocking down trees. Witnesses saw Paul Dell squatting near town, court records said. "Til people thought they might have heard gunfire."

The Black Angus was already closed for the night. The kitchen was clean. In the early morning hours, someone fired five shots, most likely from inside the building.

The_classified_who_did_so_many_as_a_traffic_ticket_in_Greencastle_or_indianapolis_was_arrested_at_the_end_of_that_week.

Hauff’s friends wonder about the loose ends. About the post-office box with all the aliases, and the rumored $1 million in a locked box, buried somewhere. His accountant says Hauff’s local bank accounts contained next to nothing. No one can find a safe deposit box under his name.

His friends wonder why the killer just didn’t wait, for Hauff would have eventually worked himself to death. But they also wonder if Hauff might not have preferred this kind of end.

Still friends and family say this, and then they point out that Richard Hauff was associated with mobsters in Chicago, that he was connected.

And that he was Sicilian.
Re: RICHARD HAUFF

RICHARD HAUFF is now about twenty-two years of age and it was reported that he and DOMINICK COLUCCI, brother of JOE COLUCCI the auto dealer, were partners in a "stop and sock" golf field at Palatine and Rand Roads.

In early January, 1959, police officers observed HAUFF's 1959 model blue Cadillac, 1958 Illinois license 2791-182, parked in front of 415 Aldine Street, the residence of DARLENE CAIFANO, wife of MARSHALL CAIFANO, the hoodlum. When HAUFF emerged from the building he was questioned and he said he was dating Mrs. CAIFANO but that he and CAIFANO were no longer on friendly terms. He denied living with her and said he lived at 1150 Lake Shore Drive. He said that CAIFANO, although separated from his wife, was still paying her bills, but he (HAUFF) did give DARLENE money for clothes, etc. He was fairly sure that the CAIFANOS had a pending case in the divorce court. HAUFF said he definitely did not intend to marry DARLENE. He was questioned about the article appearing in Kupcinet's Column in the "Sun-Times" of January 2, 1959 relative to his purchase of the Mount Prospect Golf Club and he said he did purchase it about three days before but that he was acting for a friend from Miami, Florida. HAUFF said he would run the club as he saw fit and that he was contemplating some improvements, including the building of two swimming pools. When questioned about his expensive cars and clothes, he stated his source of income was from real estate and that one deal would pay for a car. It developed that MARSHALL CAIFANO's present girl friend is MARIE EVENSON, 6120 North Damen Avenue.

HENRY SOPHIE, according to informant, was interviewed on January 7, 1959 and he stated he sold the Mount Prospect Country Club to the H & C Enterprises, Inc., for $800,000; that $150,000 was held in escrow by the trustee, the American National Bank, and the remaining $650,000 was in the form of a mortgage held by Mr. SOPHIE through this bank. SOPHIE said his attorney was JACK ENRIGHT, whose office is in the Chicago Title and Trust Company Building. HAUFF was represented by Attorney LELAND SMITH in the transaction which was handled by SOPHIE's son-in-law, MIKE WEBER, who is in the real estate business at Cicero and Peterson Avenues. SOPHIE said the golf course was a losing proposition and that he was surprised when HAUFF did not haggle about the price of $800,000, which frankly he did not expect to get.

Attorney LELAND SMITH was interviewed and he said he had represented HAUFF in many real estate deals. He said no individual was buying the golf course since it was a syndicate operation.

MIKE WEBER, when questioned in January, 1959, at his office at 4744 West Peterson Avenue, said he met HAUFF about six years ago (when HAUFF was about sixteen years) while playing golf at the Tam O'Shanter Country Club. On July 3, 1958 HAUFF took an option on the Mount Prospect Country Club with a check for $25,000, and claimed at the time that MARY T. WOODS, a wealthy aunt, was putting up the money. It developed that a MARY T. WOODS owns the property occupied by the Ray Cole Motors at 6121 Northwest Highway, Chicago, and that she lives at 5844 Odell Avenue.
Where's My Cut? Hauff 'Silent' Pal

BY EDWARD D. WILLIAMS

A petition filed in bankruptcy court alleges that Richard Hauff, playboy and associate of gangsters, has a silent partner in the million dollar Mount Prospect Country club.

The partner, August Ciricella, filed a petition in the club's bankruptcy proceedings yesterday declaring that he is half owner with Hauff of the land on which the country club is located.

Ciricella, 43, of 1536 Austin av., Cicero, operates the Folies Theater, a burlesque house at 415 S. State st.

If his claim stands up, Ciricella may split a $157,000 nest egg with Hauff. The petition asks Referee Wallace Streeter to create a lien in Ciricella's favor for one half the fee of the real estate.

Partners Split

This means that if a proposed sale of the country club, including the land, to a group of northwest suburban business men for $555,000 is approved by Streeter, the two partners will get $67,000 in October, 1962, and $100,000 more in October, 1963.

Ciricella also states that the bank, holder of the trust of the property, that all proceeds from the trust should be paid to Hauff and Ciricella.

Altho his name had not been brought up in the five weeks of hearings, Ciricella said outside court that he always has been "under the impression" that he has a half interest in the property.

He said: "I've been around and I know what's going on. So I want to settle this thing as soon as possible and get my money out of this."

Mysterious Wealth

Hauff, 25, whose sources of wealth are mysterious, now is in the army.

Streeter has refused to approve the sale of the club until he determines the real ownership. If the sale is approved, creditors will be asked to accept 25 cents on the dollar.
CAPONE LINK HAUNTS PLUSH COUNTRY CLUB

Capone Link Lame of Nick Dean Dims Golf Meet Hope

The name of Nick Circella, Cas No. Dean, a former leader in the Capone gang's labor racketeering activities, as recently popped up to aunt the Mont Prospect country club, which will be the scene next month of the 30,000 World Women's Golf Tournament.

Officials of the Chicago Distri cut Golf Association checked the club's ownership, it was announced, when the club made a bid to join the association, an important member ship for any club with big Tournament ideas.

Richard W. Hauff, 24-year Owner of the club, has bid for a 1960 men's pro
amateur and open Tournament for a purse of at least $75,000, the richest in

Record of Purchase

In the basement vaults of county recorders office, officials found that the H & C Enterprises, Inc., had purchased the Mont Prospect club last year from Roy A. Smith for $800,000.

State records disclosed that H & C Enterprises was organized by Hauff and August Circella and Mary
Cara of 3220 Lake Shore Association officials then led the Chicago Crime commission to investigate Circella and Hauff.

The commission had a large on Hauff. He is a man of golfing and an Iranian man, who has a known influence in Chicago.

Last year he came under the scrutiny of the secretly operated Chicago police Scotland Yard detail and the Federal Bureau of Investigation
when he was seen with Marshall Capo and other top flight crime syndicate hoodlums. He frequently dated film and stage celebrities and spent money lavishly. But the source of his money was a mystery. He refused to tell investigators where he got his money.

Brother of Dean

August Circella, the crime commission reported to start-tied association officials, is a ger brother of the notorious Nick Dean, who was deported to Argentina in 1955.
The younger Circella operates a burlesque and movie show in south State Street and is a member of the Chicago Movie Picture Operators union, the commission reported.

The background of Hauff and Circella makes his chances of joining the Chi-ago District Golf Association slim, association officials told
THE TRIBUNE.

Hauff was upset when he was informed that the association had found out about his association with Circella.

"Circella was dropped from the picture last year when he was unable to help financially in the purchase of the club," Hauff insisted.
"I thought the corporation was dissolved and I'm durn-founted that his name is on the records."

Partner in Purchase

His partner in the purchase of the club was Sol Cotter, 6009 N. Francisco Ave., a retired drug and liquor store operator. Hauff said he will become sole owner of the club when he buys out Cotter.

"I canvassed 90 per cent of the more than 100 association members and they are all for me," Hauff said, but admitted that it takes only seven votes to keep him from geting his membership.

At this time, the club is gearing up for a new season and weekend events have been back. He insists he has no idea why he was assaulted.

Investigators were told that to the time Weber was beaten, a wealthy tool and die shop owner, an acquaintance of Weber, was attacked by hoodlums wielding ball bats. The victim has refused to tell police about the ball bats attack.

Tribune
9/22/59

60-269-6
Already in prison

Ex-playboy Hauff accused of fraud

A federal grand jury has indicted prison inmate Richard G. Hauff, 33, onetime Rush St. playboy, on a charge of defrauding a window washer of his life savings.

The indictment accuses Hauff of having fraudulently obtained $50,000 from Rudolph M. Valasquez after convincing Valasquez that Valasquez' wife, Florence, intended to divorce him.

It said he, told Valasquez, formerly of 4115 S. Mozart, that the money would be placed in a safe-deposit box so Mrs. Valasquez could not get it. Instead, Hauff kept the $50,000 and put in the safe-deposit box two paper sacks filled with $1 bills, according to the indictment.

HAUFF, already in prison on another charge, could face up to 20 additional years if convicted on the fraud charge.

He was sentenced two years ago to three years in prison for fraudulently using telegraph wires to solicit $4,450 in investments in a nonexistent Las Vegas casino.
Prison term on taxes for mob chum

Richard Hauff, onetime Rush Street 'Rover Boy,' Monday was sentenced to serve 18 months in prison for failing to file income tax returns in 1963 and 1964.

U.S. District Court Judge Richard B. Austin ordered the sentence to be served after Hauff completes two concurrent three-year prison terms he is serving in connection with the swindles.

Hauff, 35, owned a country club and nightclub frequented by crime syndicate members.

He and a group known as the Rover Boys used to appear at Rush Street spots, usually accompanied by well-dressed young women. Hauff was pistol-whipped a few years ago when he showed up as the escort of the former wife of gang figure Marshall Caifano.
Playboy Pal of Mob Gets 3-Year Term

Richard Hauff, 30, playboy pal of Chicago hoodlums, was sentenced yesterday to three years in the federal peniten- tiary after his conviction on five counts of wire fraud.

The three-year sentence was added to another three-year sentence Hauff got last year on charges of conspiring to obtain secret government information.

Both convictions will be appealed, according to Hauff’s attorney. Hauff is free on bond during the appeals.

Guilty of Swindle

Hauff was found guilty by a jury May 26 on the wire fraud charges. The charges stemmed from a 1961 swindle Hauff perpetrated on potential investors who gave Hauff $12,000 for a hotel and casino he said he was going to build in Las Vegas.

Federal Judge Alexander J. Napoli sentenced Hauff to three years in prison on each count but the terms will run concurrently.

Gerald M. Werksman, assistant United States attorney who prosecuted the case, said Hauff was “a menace to society, a con man of the worst type.”

Plea for Probation

Daniel C. Ahern, Hauff’s attorney, pleaded to the court for probation for Hauff. Ahern said his client was an Iranian orphan brought to this country by American soldiers during World War II.

Hauff was found guilty and sentenced last Oct. 21 on charges of conspiring to get secret government information compiled by internal revenue agents investigating Hauff’s 1938 and 1939 income tax returns.

Hauff was a Rush street play- boy, frequently seen with movie starlets on his arm, who hung around with Chicago syndicate figures.
Former Tax Aid, Playboy Found Guilty

A FEDERAL JURY has convicted a former internal revenue service attorney, and a playboy who hobnobbed with hoodlums, after 11 hours of deliberation.

Arthur Nasser, 36, the IRS lawyer, was found guilty of two counts of conflict of interest and one count of conspiracy in helping co-defendant Richard Hauff avoid paying 1958 and 1959 income taxes.

Hauff, an Iranian orphan who became a million-dollar golf club entrepreneur, was found guilty of conspiracy. The jury dismissed two conflict-of-interest counts against him.

Before the jury entered deliberations Friday evening, Assistant United States Atty. Richard Schults had summed up his case by charging “Nasser, an attorney and officer of the court, earned his living by selling his knowledge of government secrets.”

THE GOVERNMENT contended Nasser investigated Hauff while with the IRS and then went to work for Hauff. Testimony from Victor Weber, an IRS investigator, indicated Nasser was recommended to Hauff by slain hoodlum Mandel “Manny” Skar.

In announcing the verdict, the jury told Judge Lynch they failed to reach agreement on a third count of conflict of interest against the two men. Judge Lynch then dismissed the charge.

In defending Nasser, attorney Maurice Walsh had contended that Nasser could not possibly remember Hauff’s case out of the hundreds he had investigated in his 8 years as IRS lawyer.

Maximum sentence for Nasser and Hauff is 2 years in prison and a fine of $10,000 each. Nasser has been free on $5,000 bond, and Hauff on $3,500 bond.

Nasser was an IRS attorney from Sept. 13, 1955, until he resigned under investigation May 17, 1963.

Judge Lynch granted defense attorneys 30 days to file for new trials, and said he would then set a date for sentencing Nasser and Hauff “early in September.”
FBI Arrests Gang Playboy Hauff In Hotel Deal

Richard Hauff, 29, a playboy and crime syndicate gangsters, was arrested by FBI agents Monday, charged with a swindle involving a phantom Nevada gambling hotel.

Victim of the alleged confidence game was identified by federal prosecutors as Sidney Lederman, an administrator in a Chicago museum. Hauff is charged with cheating Lederman out of $2,500.

Unexplained in the bizarre case was how the fast-talking Hauff, a habitue of Rush Street cafes, contacted Lederman to obtain the money from him.

Hauff was seized by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents on an indictment returned secretly by a federal grand jury.

The indictment was suppressed until the G-men seized Hauff in the Cross Roads Motel, 4201 Mannheim Rd., Schiller Park. Hauff claimed to work as a booking agent for a cafe in the motel.

The indictment charged that Hauff obtained the $2,500 from Lederman as an investment in a gambling casino-motel which Hauff promised to build in Las Vegas, Nev.

The casino-hotel, which Hauff called the Continental, never was constructed, the indictment alleged.

At one point, government attorneys said, Hauff took Lederman to Las Vegas to survey a patch of desert which Hauff claimed was to be the site of the glittering casino.

Hauff also displayed a color brochure of the nonexistent Continental to induce Lederman to invest in the gambling palace, according to the indictment.

Lederman sent the $2,500 to Hauff on March 3, 1961, while Hauff was in the Army at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., it was charged.

Hauff obtained the money by telegram in violation of federal statutes banning frauds by wire, said U.S. Attorney Edward W. Hanrahan.

After his arrest, Hauff was locked up at Police Headquarters, 1121 S. State, pending a bail hearing Tuesday before U.S. Comr. C. S. Bentley Pika.

A prison term of 25 years was imposed on Hauff by an Army court-martial in Korea in 1962. Hauff was convicted then of larceny, forgery, escaping confinement and being absent without leave.

Hauff gained freedom in 1964, however, when his 25-year sentence was reduced to 18 months.

TAX LIENS HIT GANG FIGURE FOR $147,445
FEB 3 1965
U.S. Ties Up Hauff's Real Estate Assets

Federal tax liens totaling $147,443 were filed with the county recorders of Cook and Lake counties yesterday against Richard Hauff, 30, former Rush street playboy, associate of crime syndicate hooligans, and one time country club owner.

The liens were filed to satisfy allegedly unpaid personal income taxes for 1959 and are designed to block any attempt by Hauff to dispose of real estate or buildings in either county.

Still outstanding against Hauff are tax liens totaling $21,500, on income taxes allegedly unpaid in 1968, that were filed in July, 1963 in Cook, Du Page, and Lake counties as well as in Las Vegas, Nev., and Fort Lauderdale and Tallahassee, Fla.

List Several Residences

Federal agents listed the following addresses for Hauff: Marina City; the Concorde motel, 6565 Mannheim rd., Rosemont; and 924 N. Highland av., Arlington Heights.

Hauff, an Iranian orphan, was brought to Chicago after World War II by an army officer.

In July, 1962, only a few years after Hauff had been hobnobbing with film stars and hooligans along Rush street in what had been termed a “rags to riches career.” he was sentenced to 25 years imprisonment by a military court in Korea.

Guilty on 23 Charges

He had been found guilty of 23 charges of fraud, passing worthless checks, and escaping military, police custody.

Later, his sentence was sharply reduced and Hauff returned to Chicago more than a year ago.

In 1956, he mysteriously became owner of the Mount Prospect Country Club. His financial backing was never made clear, but August Ciccolla, burlesque house operator and brother-in-law of Nick Debono, who was deported to Italy, claimed he was an actual black partner in the golf course.
MILLION DOLLAR SUIT NEAR SETTLEMENT  MAR 1  1961

Playboy Hauff Scores in Golf 'Match'

BY EDWARD WILLIAMS

Richard Hauff, 25, the playboy who struck it rich on the wrong side of the tracks, apparently is out of the financial wilderness that threatened to swallow up his million dollar golf club.

Referee Wallace Streeter has cleared the way for disposition of the bankruptcy case involving the Mount Prospect Country Club against which involuntary proceedings had been filed by creditors.

$200 GI Uniforms

Hauff, an Iranian orphan adopted by a United States soldier and brought here in 1944, grew up to be witty, personable, and an expert golfer. He hung around with Rush Street hoodlums who became so fond of him they decided to help him buy a golf club. Not a set—just one.

He is in the army—indubitably—and wears $200 tailored uniforms as a quartermaster's clerk in Fort Sam Houston, Tex. He occasionally chariots a plane for a weekend visit with his pals here.

Hauff had offered the creditors 25 cents on the dollar to settle $250,000 in debts. He was turned down.

The creditors balked again yesterday when Hauff's attorney, Joseph Kadison, offered 50 cents.

But Referee Streeter overruled the objections and set March 23 for confirmation of the plan of payment.

If no new obstacles arise before then, it is expected that Streeter will wind up the financial affairs of Hauff and the club.

On Feb. 27 and 28, Hauff and his silent partner, August Circella, both testified that Circella had lent Hauff $100,000 toward the club and that the title to both the club and its land always has been in Hauff's name.

Books Confusing

Previous hearings before Streeter became tangled when one set of the club's books showed the land was owned by the club, while a second set showed Hauff owned the land and leased it to the club.

The creditors preferred to recognize the first set and clamored for "throwing the land into the pot for dividing."

However, since he has been convinced that Hauff holds title to the land, Streeter has approved the sale of the club and land to a syndicate of northwest suburban business men who offered $885,000 for the package and put earnest money in escrow.

Circella, 43, of 1536 Austin av., Cicero, owns a burlesque theater at 450 S. State st.

After the sale, has been consummated, it is expected that Hauff will pay off Circella's loan and then split another $167,000, the estimated value of the land. Hauff also is to receive $50,000 in back salary as club president.

After payment of federal and state taxes owed by the club, along with attorneys fees, the creditors will get 50 per cent of the remainder.

Meanwhile, the club will operate on a daily fee basis. This means that the average golfer can go out and flounder around in the traps that seldom bothered the Rush street kid.
HAUFF TANGLES WITH NEW WOE - DRAFT BOARD

U. S. Wants to Know Where He's Been

(Picture on back page)

Richard Hauff, 25, former operator of Mount Prospect Country club and an associate of hoodlums, was inducted into the army yesterday shortly after he had surrendered to federal officials.

He had surrendered on a federal criminal complaint that he had failed to notify draft authorities of where he was.

He Doesn't Like It

Cursing and waving his arms, Hauff accompanied his attorney, Frank Martoccio, to tell C. S. Bentley Pike, United States commissioner, that he had received a letter from draft authorities only yesterday morning. He said the envelope, postmarked last Thursday, showed that it had been forwarded several times. Hauff now lives at 6600 Mannheim rd., Des Plaines.

Hauff, named in an involuntary bankruptcy suit involving his operations of the country club, had been fighting induction since last June 13, contending that he had an eye ailment.

In his last effort to avoid military service, Hauff appeared at a hearing last September and pleaded the 5th amendment when asked if he were a Communist.

Claims He's Willing

When Hauff's lawyer informed Pike that his client was not aware that draft authorities had been looking for him lately and that he was willing to comply with a pre-induction summons, Pike continued Hauff's case until Nov. 7, under $1,000 bond.

Hauff and his attorney then went to the army induction center at 615 Van Buren st. Hauff seemed startled at the swiftness of his induction.

He was sworn into the service, and ordered to report at 9:30 a.m. today at Union station to be transported to Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Richard Hauff (left) on route with another prisoner to U. S. commissioner's office before he was inducted swiftly into army yesterday.

(Story on page 8, part 2)
Signs Silence Loud
Golfing Gang Leaders

BY GEORGE BLISS

Golfers at the White Pines golf club near Bensenville, Du Page County, did a double take recently when they noticed a small army of men going down the fairway in a horde of battery-driven carts.

Every now and then the group came to a halt. The men in the carts went into long discussions. Several of them selected golf clubs and hit the golf balls. The flight of the balls was followed closely by the gallery and the results were accompanied by loud comments, some good and some bad.

Golfers Learn Facts

The golfers, it was agreed by the group, had held up their progress, were able to get close enough to get an idea what it was all about.

It developed that Jack Cerone, a crooked syndicate hoodlum, and Richard Haight, an amateur golf star, and a pal of the hoodlums, were on a golf outing. They were accompanied by a large group of unsavory-looking men, some of whom were later identified as Marshall Califano, Willie (Potatoes) Daddio, and William (Smoker) Allosio, all top syndicate chiefs.

The hoodlums didn't care much about exercising their legs and rented the carts at $8 each.

Carts Are Bumped

"This is better than Riverview Park," one of the hoodlums was heard to say as he deliberately bumped another cart from behind. The two men in the cart that was bumped laughed loudly and dodged behind a bunker.

In between playing tag, the gunmen made wagers on each shot and putt made by those who were identified as the golfers. The bets were much like the usual wagers made on a golf course such as syndicates, scotch, nassau, and do and don't bets.

"I'll take 2 to 1 that Jackie doesn't hit the green on his next shot," a gambler was heard to announce. It seems that there were wagers between $500 and $1,000 on almost every shot, with the odds varying on the man who was making the shot.

Manager Is Told

"The situation was brought to the attention of Fred Willey, club manager. The regular Waite Pines golfers like to play without being held up for great lengths of time and Willey was aware of this.

Notices were placed in the club house and at the starting tees that the insurance company handling liability at the course wouldn't be liable for those on the course who weren't playing golf. Also, the signs made clear, the carts could only be rented to golfers.

Willey admitted that the hoodlums haven't been on the course since he posted the signs. He said Cerone had been a White Pines golfer for many years and until this year had been a golfer who behaved himself.

TRIBUNE
9/12/60

60-55=135.5-A
Dick Hauff Busted; Country Club Closed

"I'm busted to the nail. The roof fell in. I've lost everything I've got. I'm defeated.

"Even the 'broad's' have deserted me. They won't speak to me. They won't even answer the phone. I can't make a comeback. I couldn't afford to take Zsa Zsa to a drive-in.

"I never want to see another golf club."

The doors were locked on the Mt. Prospect country club last Friday by order of U.S. District court Judge Michael Igoe.

And Richard W. Hauff, the 26-year-old playboy-owner of the club, was out of business.

HAUFF'S FINANCIAL demise came after three creditors petitioned the court August 15 to declare the Mt
ALWAYS LEGAL, HAUFF SAYS

SEP 9, 1960

I'm No Saint, Suburb Club Playboy Admits

BY MERVIN BLOCK

Richard W. Hauflf, who is the target of more publicity and more probes than "Lady Chatterley's Lover," says he has nothing to conceal.

"I've always operated legally," he maintains. "But not always ethically."

Hauflf, the Iranian immigrant who started from scratch and clawed his way to a fortune, observed:

"I don't think you can name anyone on top who is a pure saint. I know I'm not."

There are others who share the sentiment that he is not a "pure saint:" including the district attorney's office and army intelligence. The latter is investigating his refusal to sign a loyalty certificate required of draftees.

Still others are his creditors, who forced his Mount Prospect Country club into bankruptcy, and several newspaper reporters, who have accused him of being a tool of the crime syndicate.

Wants 'His Side' Told

Confident that those arrayed against him are mistaken, the big dealing, free-wheeling real estate speculator granted an interview to Chicago's American to tell "his side" of the story.

"My wrongs I want you to write, too," he said yesterday.

Relaxing in his luxurious suite in the O'Hare Inn "Swimming pools with underwater music," just north of the airport, Hauflf delighted in dissecting a newspaper story that said army intelligence had been given a strange assignment:

"Prove that Richard Hauflf, 25, bachelor playboy and member of the Rush St. Rover Boys is a viable American citizen," Hauflf read aloud, then ok "it apart, phrase by phrase.

"Bad As Can Be"
He said he'd read 24 not 25. He knew getting the draft back or and added:

"Yes, I'm a playboy. If it wasn't for Zsa Zsa Gabor and those other bimbos, I wouldn't be in the papers."

Besides dating Miss Gabor, he has dated Mag Myles, Barbara Luna, Venetia Stevens, and other Hollywood personalities.

"I asserted he didn't know what a rush street roomer is, remarking:

"I go to the Pump room. That's not on Rush. And the Chez (Pares). That's not on Rush."

Then he gleefully pounced on the last phrase:

"How can they prove I'm a loyal American citizen? I'm not even a citizen."

It's His Business

Hauflf said he refused to sign several forms, including one denying membership in subversive organizations, because of a belief they duplicated earlier oaths. He said he wouldn't divulge his personal history to the army because he thought the army was not entitled to know it.

Asked by the reporter whether he was willing to serve in the army, Hauflf said "yes."

Desirous of serving? "No."

Dabs at His Eyes
Concerning "trouble with the army psychiatrist," Hauflf huffed:

"Trouble? I didn't say nothin'. I didn't answer. I said, 'Do I look like I have trouble mentally?'"

Hauflf frequently dabbed at his eyes with a handkerchief dipped in water to complaining that his eyes don't meet army requirements. He also spoke of being disturbed by bleeding ulcers.

To the charge that he is a pal of Tony Accardo, reputed chief of the crime syndicate here, Hauflf insisted he doesn't know the man and never met him.

Hauflf did concede, tho, that he has gone golfing and night clubbing with one of Accardo's chief deputies, Marshall Calafano.

A year ago Hauflf was pistol whipped outside the apartment of Calafano's ex-wife, whom he had been dating.

Financial Whispers

The interview was interrupted for about 15 minutes when Hauflf's accountant arrived and the two began a whispered discussion of Hauflf's finances.

Hauflf (rhymes with "cough") was heard to mention numerous six figures sums. He performed many calculations lightninglike in his mind.

In 1945, Hauflf was brought mace and adopted by an army major who had taken a liking to the penniless orphan in a camp near Tehran, the capital of Iran, still widely known as Persia.

Hauflf first became prominent when, at 15, he finished fourth in a junior open golf tournament sponsored by this newspaper. He soon became a champion, and played golf with Perry Como, Phil Harris, Eddie Cantor, and other celebrities.

After being graduated from Arlington Heights High school in 1953, Hauflf attended Florida state university. He said he acquired a degree there.

Starts the Climb

Three years ago, with $5,000 he had borrowed from a fraternity brother and $8,000 borrowed from two attorneys, he entered the first of the land transactions that he has pyramided into wealth, according to his recital.

He bought an option on 91 acres in northwestern Cook County. Later, after the value zoomed, he borrowed against the option to purchase the 63-acre Mount Prospect golf course, he related. To make the $160,000 down payment on the $300,000 tract, he says he also used money he borrowed from another businessman, to whom he was introduced by stripper Lili St. Cyr.

This Is Bankrupt?

Altho the country club, which he heads, recently was declared bankrupt by the court, now probably worth more than a million dollars, remains his.

In addition, he said, he owns about 10 per cent of 140 acres elsewhere and 40 per cent of a 43 acre parcel in Las Vegas. The Vegas site may be used for a hotel, of which Hauflf would be president.

Hauflf said repeatedly during the interview that none of his associates in any venture is a hoodlum.

In response to a question he said he earned just under $200,000 last year. Pressed as to his worth, he replied:

"I'm far, far from being a millionaire. You can't take that seriously."

"Well, this is a fine place."
Publicity His Downfall

"If it wasn't for the bad publicity, I'd have 5 million dollars right now. Five million dollars! But a lot of people have backed off deals.

"I could have 10 times better than 5 million, if it wasn't for the bad and incorrect journalism that was written."

He said his dates with celebrities have been "over-exaggerated tremendously." His dates with them are "just like a college boy dates a college girl."

Huge Wardrobe

The husky [5 feet six inches, 152 pounds] manipulator has a huge wardrobe of fine clothes, drives a new Cadillac convertible, says he plans soon to move into the 1400 block of Lake Shore drive, and follows an elastic schedule:

"I get up when I wake up, and I go to bed when I'm tired."

"...I've always operated legally, but not always ethically. I don't think you can name anyone on top who is a pure saint. I know I'm not."

RICHARD HAUFF, who has fought his way to a fortune, in a series of candid shots taken of him during exclusive interview in his plush suite in the O'Hare Inn. Thru-out interview, he used his hands extensively in expressing himself, and most of the time dangled his tinted glasses in a nervous manner.

"...Yes, I'm a playboy. I'm as bad a playboy as can be. If it wasn't for Zsa Zsa and those other broads, I wouldn't be in the papers."

"...I'm far, far from being a millionaire. No, not that far. Just make it far."
YOUNG MAN, BIG DOUGH

Money 'Easy' for Club Boss Hauff

Mt. Prospect Owner Hits Jackpot on Land

BY BILL JAUS

RICHARD W. HAUFF, 24, revealed Wednesday how in 15 months he built an $8,000 loan from two friends into forthcoming solo ownership of a million-dollar country club.

"I have a tremendous wealth for making money," said Hauff.

Hauff, former amateur s sailing champion, is presi dent of Mt. Prospect Coun try Club, which on July 23, will host the richest ($20,00 0) tournament ever of ered to women professional fers.

"By the time that touriment comes," said Hauff, will be the sole owner of the club, subject to terms of the recorded mortgage."

***

RECORDS of the American National Bank & Trust of Chicago (revealed at uff's request), disclose at uff is close to becoming sole owner of the club.

The bank records show that Hauff has paid $160, 0 to Sol Colter, retired store owner, who is Hauff's part in the club.

Furthermore, the bank records show that Hauff will have bought out his partner completely when he pays him $30,000 more.

COTLER put up $140,000
and Hauff $40,000 last Jan uary when the pair bought Mt. Prospect club from Henry A. Sophia. Purchase price was $500,000.

The $150,000 was a down payment. The remainder is the mortgage at 6 1/2 per cent.

Despite the difference in the money each partner put up, Hauff and Colter each held 50 per cent equity in the club.

***

HAUFF said Colter agreed to the 50-50 terms of ownership because "I promised to buy him out quickly and at 6 per cent interest.

Last February, Hauff paid
Colter a certified check for $17,000. He also turned over to Colter two lots valued at $15,000.

Hauff signed a note for the remaining $107,000. He has paid all but $30,000 of that note, the bank records reveal.

***

OTHER Mt. Prospect of icers are: secretary and director, Leland W. Smith, attorney, of 134 N. Lasalle;
director Max Brown, saving, and loan officer. odd Lincoln, and director Curtis D. Dax, attorney for

Smith and Brown made an $8,000 loan to Hauff in March, 1958. Hauff said he built that money into his present holdings through a series of real estate deals.

Hauff is president of the H&C corporation of which August Circella — younger brother of hoodlum Nick
"Nick Dean" Circella — is treasurer.

The H&C corporation
purchased an option (for $25,000) to buy Mt. Prospect cub in July, 1958, but H&C corporation did not buy the club. Hauff and Colter did.

"THE H&C corporation
never operated," Smith said.
"It failed to pay franchise taxes, and it will be dissolved."

"I met Mr. (August) Circella through golf," Hauff said. "And at a later date, became evident to me,
upon advice of counsel, that I did not need his money backing."

"I did not know he was the brother of Nick Dean," said Hauff. "I did not and not do see anything wrong with his character or his business."

***

HAUFF said that he had never asked any member cub of the Chicago District Golf Association for anything to do with becoming a member of the CDGA, nor have I ever formally aplly for membership in the CDGA.

Membership in the CDGA is not necessary for a club to hold a big tournament
such as the women's world championship next month.

***

RICHARD HAUFF

Golf pays off in Mt. Prospect

Hauff says he made his money:
He borrowed $8,000 from Smith and Brown in March, 1958, and used the money to purchase an option to buy 167 acres of property on Higgins Ridge
Mt. Prospect.

The property was then worth $12,000 per acre. It was worth $3,750 per acre when Hauff sold nine months later... at a profit of $137,000.

Hauff then engineered an other profitable real-estate transaction. He bought 26
lots at McHenry on the lake front for $16,000 in August, 1958. He sold them a few months later for $44,000.

***

HAUFF also cites a home which he and Smith bought for $24,500 and sold for $37,800. He owns 28 lots in Mt. Prospect, many of them near his country club.

Hauff says he can complete buying out his Mt.
Prospect partner and pay off the mortgage because "I met $150,000 a year on membership dues... 300
members at $800 per year
dues.

"I gross $380,000 a year on the club with sales of food and liquor... and I net $150,000," said Hauff.

160 269-1
Authorities Scrutinize
Rags-to-Riches Story

BY GEORGE BLISS

One of the strangest success stories in Chicago's history, centering around a young Italian orphan, has come under the scrutiny of the police and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents.

The star of the tale, which rivals any of the rags-to-riches stories of Horatio Alger, is Elizabeth Hauff, an amateur golfer. Fifteen years ago she was a homeless waif in Italy, where she met Franklin Hauff, a North Western Railway transportation engineer serving with the army engineer corps there.

The eldest Hauff, of 924 N. Highland Ave., Arlington Heights, adopted him, young Hauff said, and brought him to this country.

A week before the younger Hauff bought a million-dollar golf club, the Mount Prospect Country Club, a small private club which he plans to convert into a private course.

Hauff claims he has some of his money in the project, but said the bulk of the price was paid by a man, whom Hauff will only describe as a "multi-millionaire," from Florida.

Thought an FBI Man

For many months the free spending Hauff has been dubbed "The Mystery Man" of the Rush street night club circles. He is a close acquaintance of golf loving Marshall Caffano and the top crusade hoodlums. He has frequented the Savoy, Queenie Baker and other film celebrities appearing in Chicago.

Mrs. Carole Murano

He has played golf with Perry Como, Phil Harris, and other celebrities. One of the elements in the story was the connection of Mrs. Carole Murano, a woman who later committed suicide.

Hauff first appeared on the Rush street scene last summer. Nobody knew much about him at first and for a while he was fingered as an FBI agent. At that time FBI agents were swarming around the Chicago police in an intensive probe of crime syndicate hoodlums and their night club holdings.

But in a short time Hauff himself became the target of the police. He became interested in Hauff because he was seen frequently with Caffano and Albert [Obie] Frabotta, another top ranking mobster.

The probes noted that Hauff began dating Caffano's beautiful blonde wife, Darlene. Dating the wife of a man, the story could be fatal, the investigators said, and began a closer watch on Hauff. However, it was discovered that Caffano and his wife were separated and Caffano was dating another girl.

Golfed with George

Hauff, who played golf with Caffano and Jack Carone, a syndicate gangster, at the Tam O'Shanter Country club, was seen at the gambling.}

business enterprises. But as he soon expected, "put up" a chance deal for five, as big as the Mount Prospect.

He said that at one time he was in the construction business, made and was dealt in real estate. He said he did not have a liquor license but will be eligible for one soon.

Two La Salle St. Offices

"I have two offices on North La Salle street in the Loop and own a home in Arlington Heights," he said. He added that he also has a Lake Shore drive address.

Hauff said he will take active charge of the Mount Prospect club in a few days. He said plans to spend another $250,000 on the course and clubhouse.

Neither Smokes Nor Drinks

He began his golfing career before he entered the Arlington Heights school and later attended Florida Southern University. Although he frequents night clubs, he neither drinks nor smokes. He said that he once was an amateur boxing champion.

"I have nothing to hide and I respect the job the FBI is doing but I cannot reconcile myself to give him information about my personal activities," he said. "I believe I am qualified by chance because I was a man, somebody they are investigating," he said.
Wounded At Close Range

Hit as Car Pulls Alongside His

A volley of bullets, gangland-style, on a moving car yesterday, wounded E. Juzwik, developer of the just-opening shopping center.

Juzwik, 43, was taken to reconstruction hospital with a bullet in the left shoulder. The Daily News learned Juzwik was on his way to give information to an Internal Revenue agent when he was shot.

No other auto containing the men pulled alongside the on-coming wagon Juzwik was in at Nagle and Ravel.

One of the men in the car shoved a gun in Juzwik's direction and fired.

At Oct. 6, the businessman pistol-whipped by three men who entered his parked car in the shopping center.

POLICE regarded this as an attempt to stop Juzwik from testifying in Criminal Court against Joseph La Mantia, 24, of 635 S. Lamon, an ex-convict accused of robbing Juzwik in February, 1958.

Juzwik testified anyway, but La Mantia was acquitted.

Police opened a hunt for him immediately after Juzwik was shot.

Juzwik told police from his hospital bed that he did not recognize the men in the other car and knew of no reason why someone would want to kill him.

The only witnesses to the shooting were two patrol boys from a nearby school.

Juzwik is also general manager of the Eeze Flow Division of Aaeo Distributing Corp., 3425 N. Harlem.

On Holy Thursday of last year, the firm was struck by a fire of mysterious origin.
Juzwik Links

SHOOTING TO

J. S. TAX QUIZ

Tells Shopping Area Financing

Edmund A. Juzwik, 48, of 720 Edgebrook terrace, northwest side business executive who was shot and wounded Tuesday at Nagle avenue and Harrison street, said Wednesday at Resurrection hospital that he believes "somebody thought I was going to spill my story to the government and create a problem."

The shooting occurred as Juzwik was on his way to meet an internal revenue agent.

For the last four years, it was learned, the government has been investigating the naming of the Harlem-Irving shopping center in which Juzwik was one of the developers. He severed his connection with the enterprise two years ago.

Turns Down Request

Juzwik told city and state's attorney's police that two weeks ago he met Michael Marchesi, 1406 Jackson avenue, River Forest, now a vice president of the shopping center, in Knie's restaurant, 126 Thatcher avenue, River view, at Marchesi's request. He asked Marchesi to overstate to the government the size of Juzwik's investment in the shopping center. Juzwik said he was passed over.

Capt. William Scharff of the South side police has ordered Marchesi and two other persons connected with the development of the center, Orlando P. Colamatto, and Atlilio Malio, arrested for questioning.

Juzwik said his first contact with the shopping center was in 1955, when Colamatto came into the office of a financing firm. Juzwik was operating at the time at 10 S. La Salle street in partnership with Dr. Samuel Diamond.

He said Colamatto was seeking a mortgage to pick up an option on 21 acres of land, including the shopping center site.

Agreed on Mortgage

Colamatto said he represented several private investors. Juzwik said he and Dr. Diamond agreed to take a $139,000 mortgage on the property, and that the group represented by Colamatto put up an additional $171,000 to finance the purchase.

After the land was bought, a separate corporation, the Norridge Construction company, was formed to build the shopping center, the officers and stockholders including Juzwik, Marchesi, Colamatto, Maxgotta, and Dr. Diamond.

The construction company obtained a $42,000 loan from an insurance company to finance the construction. In the course of the construction, Juzwik said, the Marchesi group invested an additional $200,000, bringing their total investment in the project to $371,000. The internal revenue service is reported to be interested in the source of this $371,000.

Check on Stockholders

Juzwik said that before going into the project, he obtained reports on his fellow stockholders from a credit agency, but that he knew nothing of their backgrounds.

After the center was built and in operation, Juzwik said, he heard that some of business shortly afterward without completing the contract for which payment had been made.

Juzwik was able to give police a description of one of the three men in the automobile from which several shots were fired at him, one of which struck him in the left shoulder.

"Everything Amicable."

"The gunman in the right hand side of the front seat was 38 to 40 years old, he said, and had a rounded face, protruding cheek bones, narrow eyes, and a rounded nose.

Juzwik said he learned of the tax investigation of the center's affairs six months ago, when the internal revenue service inquired as to the amount of his investment in the project. The agent with whom he talked, he said, told him the service wanted the figures to determine the investment of Marchesi and the others.

On the day of the shooting, Juzwik said, he was on his way to the Loop to meet Samuel Robbins, an accountant for the shopping center. He said they planned to go to the La Salle National bank to collect some of his records bearing on the project, after which they were to meet with the internal revenue agent.

Juzwik said he had been informed that other members of the development group already had given statements to the internal revenue service.

Contract Uncompleted

One of the things that strengthened his determination to withdraw from the project, Juzwik said, was the closing of the center having been completed. The other partners who were investors in the center, he said, had threatened to ask the government for a revaluation of the property, which would have been tantamount to giving them a bail-out.

"I had no money and I knew the men on the other side were in the same boat," Juzwik said. "I was out of business anyway and I knew I would never be able to make any money on the project."
HAUFF ATTACK SUSPECT WINS HIS FREEDOM

Cosmo Orlando, 39, of 44 E. Goethe st., was found not guilty Monday of the slugging of Richard W. Hauff, 25, owner of the Mount Prospect Country Club, on Sept. 14 in front of 20 E. Cedar st.

Hauff testified that he was slugged on the back of the head as he was taking a woman to her home at the Cedar street address. He said he did not see the slasher's face, but identified Orlando as his assailant by his clothing and size. Judge William V. Daly of Criminal court ruled that identification was insufficient.

Orlando was seized at the rear of 50 E. Cedar st. shortly after the slugging.

Ex-Honky-Tonk Owner Acquitted In Beating Case

A former N. Clark honky-tonk owner was acquitted Monday of a charge of assault to kill a suburban golf course owner.

Criminal Court Judge William V. Daly pronounced the not guilty verdict for Cosmo Orlando, 37, of 444 W. Goethe, without comment.

Orlando was accused of pistol-whipping Richard Hauff, 25, owner of Mount Prospect Country Club, Sept. 14. Two men accosted Hauff near the doorway of an apartment at 20 E. Cedar, where Hauff's girlfriend lived. He was flailed with pistol barrels.

Orlando, who described himself as an unemployed bartender, was found near the scene. He formerly owned Melody Casino, 1260 N. Clark.
DEFENDANT ARRESTED 9-15-59

GJ 245
10-7-59

COSMO ORLANDO, 39 yrs. ASSAULT TO COMMIT MURDER BLACK JACK

PW: RICHARD W. HAUFF: MT. PROSPECT ILLINOIS

SOLE OWNER & PRESIDENT OF MT. PROSPECT COUNTRY CLUB
MT. PROSPECT, ILLINOIS.....
Clearbrook 9-4200

I was with one DARLENE MARSHALL: 20 E. CEDAR and in the process of crossing the street (CEDAR ST.) when two men were parked in car and one got out and started to hit me with BLACK JACK on my head no conversation of any kind --- as I resisted this man / the other man hit me in the back of the head --- I fall to the ground for a period of 10 to 12 seconds, I then walked into the bldg, went upstairs with DARLENE she ran into the apt. police notified, they arrived immediately then I was taken to HENROTIN HOSPITAL where I sustained 8 stitches on my head and 4 on my leg.

I gave sub. the same statement at the 35th Dist. Sta I viewed a lineup , 35th Dist. 7 men in line and I pos. id. the deft COSMO as my assaulter
PREL. HEARING --- Br. 44 --- JUDGE JUDGE NAPOLI --- Oct. 7, 59
deft represented and been bound over to the GJ.

next page please.
Café Man Held in Street Attack

A former Clark street night-club owner today was charged with attempting to murder Richard W. Hauff, 25, owner of the Mount Prospect Country Club and rags to riches mystery figure.

Hauff was bashed on the head in front of 20 E. Cedar St. as he accompanied the blonde ex-wife of a syndicate hoodlum to her apartment. His companion was Darlene Marshall, 29, who divorced Marshall Feb. 14, 1950.

Police charged Cosmo Orlando, 45, of 44 W. Roscoe St., with assault to commit murder and assault with a deadly weapon after Hauff signed complaints against him.

Out on $16,000 Bond

Orlando, once owner of the Paradise “Show” Lounge at 1031 N. Clark St. and the old Melody Casino, formerly at 1260 N. Clark St., was ordered to appear in Felony Court tomorrow and released on bonds totaling $5,000.

Police are investigating the background of Hauff’s friendship with Marshall and also that of the deal in which Hauff assumed control of the country club last January.

Hauff is reportedly deeply in debt to certain hoodlums in the country club deal. Police said the attack may have been a warning to pay up—or to get out.

One Gun, One Shot Fired

A shot was discharged during the attack and two guns were found near the scene. But Hauff and police think the shot was accidental.

One of the guns, a .38 caliber Colt revolver, police said, is registered in the name of John Wada, 45, policeman who was suspended six weeks ago after he admitted the theft of 11 expensive clocks from a show window at the Drake Hotel.

This gun was found in the area near the rear of 50 E. Cedar St. One shot had been fired from it. Orlando was found hiding in the shrubbery at the rear of 50 E. Cedar St.

RICHARD HAUFF AT HENROTIN HOSPITAL

“...but they didn’t.”

He said he was taking a walk when he heard the shots and ducked into the shrubbery for protection.

17-4003-2
Richard Hauff, a Pal of Hoods, Is Blackjacketed

Richard W. Hauff, 23, an associate of the Chicago crime syndicate's top leaders and a current holder of the Mount Prospect Country Club, was struck on the back of the head with a blackjack in an attack by two men in front of 20 Cedar Street early Tuesday. Witnesses said they also heard several shots fired and saw a man running from the scene.

Hauff was taken to Henry Hospital where stitches were taken in the back of his head. He was accompanied by a young blonde woman who gave her name as Dorothy Marshall.

Held for Questioning

Howard Pierson, deputy chief of detectives, said Hauff and the woman would be taken to the East Chicago Police Station for questioning after Hauff's wound was treated.

Police arrested three men and a woman near the beating scene, found lying in some bushes near 50 E. Cedar St., identified by police as Cora Orlando.

He claimed he had heard shots and ducked into the bushes for protection. Police identified the woman, who gave her name as Darlene Marshall, as the former wife of the crime syndicate leader Carmine Caifano, with whom Hauff associated until he began dating Darlene.

Woman Is Struck

Police were investigating the attack on the couple as possible assassination attempt by hoodlums. Police said Darlene was struck first on the shoulder, then in the head. She ran screaming to the door of her apartment at 20 Cedar Street as the two men began to attack Hauff.

Witnesses said that after shots were fired, the two assailants fled. Police found a .38 Colt revolver in a nearby alleyway with one bullet fired from it. They also found a loaded but unfired Magnum pistol lying in the parkway in front of 20 E. Cedar St.

Return from Show

Hauff told police that he and the Marshall woman had gone to a show. He said he had just given his car to a car hiker from a nearby garage and was walking with the Marshall woman to her apartment when someone began beating him on the head.

He said he fell to his knees and heard a shot fired. He said the two fled as Miss Marshall began screaming and running.

Hauff said that one of the men had on a dark blue jacket and that the other wore a sweater.

Police had commented when Hauff began dating Miss Marshall, 30, that such an action might be dangerous and bring reprisals from hoodlum leaders.

Miss Marshall was Caifano's second wife and obtained a divorce from him on March 9.
Court Appearance

Cosmo Orlando leaving Felony court after appearance on charge of beating Richard Hauff. OCT 8 1959

Cosmo Orlando, 37, of 44 E. Goethe st., was held to the grand jury Wednesday on a charge of assault with intent to kill. He was identified in Felony court by Richard Hauff, 25, owner of the Mount Prospect Country club, as the man who assaulted him Sept. 15 as he walked with Miss Darlene Marshall, 39, ex-wife of a crime syndicate hoodlum, toward her apartment at 20 E. Cedar st. Judge Alexander J. Napoli freed Orlando in $5,000 bond.

TRIBUNE
TRIBUNE

HAUFF QUITS NIGHT LIFE ON RUSH STREET

SEP 21 1959

Mystery Man to Give Time to Business

BY GEORGE BLISS

Richard W. Hauff, 25, owner of the Mount Prospect Country Club, said Sunday that pleasure and business do not mix and he is giving up the bright lights of the near north side and the glamorous girls of Rush Street.

Hauff, known as a mystery man of the financial and life circles, was blackjacketed and slugged last Tuesday while escorting Miss Darlene Marshall, 35, ex-wife of Marshall Caifano, crime syndicate boss.

His romance with her has never helped his career, Hauff said, and he has decided to break off with her. He had done so a month before the assault occurred, he said, but took her to a movie last week at her request.

Friend of Hoodlums

Last summer federal agents and city detectives began an investigation of Hauff when they noted that he was escorting Miss Marshall, then Mrs. Caifano, to various places and was friendly with some top hoodlums.

Hauff said Sunday that he will testify against Cosmo Orlando, 37, of 44 E. Goethe st., whom he identified as one of his assailants. Hauff was late getting to court Wednesday and the case was continued to Oct. 7.

Fifteen years ago Hauff was a homeless wulf in Iran. Last year, he purchased the Mount Prospect Club for almost $1 million dollars. He insisted that none of his hoodlum pals had any money in the deal and that he now is sole owner of the club, "outside of a big mortgage."

Things at Mount Prospect weren't running too well at times during the summer, Hauff said. The $20,000 International Ladies Professional Invitational golf tournament which he sponsored last July resulted in a loss of $40,000, he said.

$60,000 in One Month

Last month, the club lost $60,000, he said, chiefly because of the cost of constructing an addition to the clubhouse and of a new swimming pool.

The future is bright, however, Hauff said. He disclosed that he will construct a 14-story hotel and 18 hole golf course in Las Vegas, Nev. Construction will start about Dec. 1. Hauff said, and a gambling casino is included in the plans.

His backers in the enterprise will, for the time being, he added to the list of unknowns who have risked their money on his business acumen.
Richard Hauff, owner and mystery man about town, was pistol-whipped Monday while on a midnight date with a hoodlum's ex-wife.

The 24-year-old associate of gangsters and glamorous women was felled by two burly assailants near the vestibule of the apartment house at 20 E. Cedar.

Hauff, owner of the Mount Prospect Country Club, where he lives, was escorting Darlene Marshall, former wife of Marshall Caifano, a top syndicate mobster.

Weapon Discharged

His attackers fled on foot after beating Hauff about the head. During the melee the weapon with which they beat him was twice discharged, but no bullets struck Hauff.

Picked up for questioning a few minutes later was Cosmo Orlando, former owner of the Melody Casino, a honky-tonk at 1200 N. Clark.

Orlando, an ex-convict, was found hiding in the bushes in front of 50 E. Cedar.

"I was out for a walk," he said. "I heard a shot, and I ran. I don't know anything about what happened to Hauff."

Hauff was not seriously hurt. He was treated and released at Huguette Hospital:

"If they wanted to kill me, they could have done it on the spot," he said.

He added that no attempt was made to rob him. Police said he is heavily in debt to unsavory persons. They said they believe the slugging was a warning to him to pay up.

Miss Marshall, Hauff, Orlando, and other witnesses were taken for questioning to the Chicago Ave. police station, 320 N. Clark.

There Hauff said he and Miss Marshall had attended a movie in the Loop. They bought some food, which they intended to eat in Miss Marshall's apartment at 20 E. Cedar.

"We were walking along Rush when we heard a car door slam at the corner of Cedar," Hauff related. "Two men jumped out and began beating me with a pistol. The gun went off, and these two guys ran."

The victim said he wouldn't be able to identify his assailants.

Called Big Spender

About a year ago, Hauff attracted attention in the Rush St. "night-life" belt. 150 feet west of the apartment building where he was slugged, as a big spender, lavish tipper and heavy gambler, although the source of his bankroll remained a mystery.

He was often seen in the company of Caifano, Albert Frabotta and other hoodlums. He escorted many striking women, including Zsa Zsa Gabor.

Hauff came under scrutiny of police and the Federal Bureau of Investigation in connection with the $800,000 purchase of the golf club in 1958.

A gun from which a single shot had been fired was found a short distance from the scene of the attack. Apparently one of the slingers tossed it away as he fled.

The .38-caliber weapon was taken to the police crime laboratory for ballistics examination.
Ex-Playboy NEWS
Here Hunted
In S. Korea
Richard Hauff Escapes
From the Military Police

SEoul (Special)—Richard W. Hauff, onetime Chicago playboy, associate of hoodlums and reluctant Army private, was the object of a military police search in Korea Wednesday.

Hauff, 27, who faces an income tax evasion charge when he finishes his Army hitch, escaped from a military police escort in Seoul last Friday.

He had been arrested April 11 on charges of larceny and forgery.

Hauff's troubles with the Army are only the latest in a long series of brushes with the law.

BEFORE entering the Army he headed a group that bought a country club in Mount Prospect and then went bankrupt, even as Hauff was spending thousands of dollars in the cabarets along Rush St. and hobnobbing with Zsa Zsa Gabor and other Hollywood beauties.

He was drafted in 1960, but refused to sign a loyalty oath, and took the Fifth Amendment when pressed for answers about whether he had ever been a member of a subversive group.

Finally he was brought before the U.S. commissioner on a complaint of failing to notify draft authorities of his whereabouts and was inducted into the Army the same day.

AFTER his induction, it was learned, government investigators had discovered he had failed to file an income tax return for 1958-59.

They figured he owed a total of $158,877 in taxes and penalties.

HAUFF, a native of Iran, was "adopted" by a group of GIs in World War II. After the war he was legally adopted by one of the ex-GIs, Franklin K. Hauff of Arlington Heights, and came to this country.

He won a caddy scholarship, attended Florida State University for a time and then became a mailman.

Soon he turned up in business with August Cirinella, a brother of Nick Dean, a Capone gangster.

Then came the country club venture.

SHORTLY after he was inducted into the Army, Hauff turned up on leave in Hollywood-in-a motel with a blond and another soldier from Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Hauff was arrested for using a stolen credit card, but the charge was dropped when the card owner failed to appear to prosecute.

In Korea, Hauff was assigned to the 1st Cavalry Division before his latest arrest.

Turn to Page 10, Column 6
Rover Boy
Hauff Is AWOL, Too
JAN. 20, 1951

Held in L.A.

On Forgery Count

Richard W. Hauff, 25, the Rush St. Rover Boy who got drafted into the Army, is AWOL, according to records at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

Hauff was being held in Los Angeles, along with a friend and his mess sergeant, on a forgery charge that alleges misuse of a credit card.

HELD WITH him are Mrs. Elaine Susan Russo, 20, and Homer Earl Biddlecome, 34, mess sergeant at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., where Hauff was assigned after being drafted in November.

The credit card belongs to Dr. Gustav Soltz, 1430 N. State, Arlington Heights.

Hauff said Dr. Soltz, whom he identified as a friend, lent him the credit card to use. However, records of the American Express show that Dr. Soltz reported on Jan. 20 that he lost the card.

THIS WAS the same date that Hauff was transferred from Ft. Leonard Wood to Ft. Sam Houston. However, he was given an eight-day delay on route to clear up some of his legal problems.

This included appearing here in Federal Court where he Mount Prospect Country Club he owns is named in a bankruptcy petition.
'GOING TO BURY YOU'

Mt. Prospect Aide Tells Hood Threats

"I'm Scared but I'll Go On Fighting Club Liquor License"

BY JACK WILLNER and TED SMART

A Mount Prospect village official has been threatened as a result of his opposition to a liquor license for the hoodlum-influenced Mount Prospect Country Club.

Charles W. Payne, 50, park commissioner, said the threats were made by Orlando Colamatteo, a club aide, and a friend of hoodlums.

"I am afraid," Payne said.

A lie test arranged by The Daily News and given by Bundekeer, Inc., a polygraph firm at 161 E. Grand, supported Payne's charge.

PAYNE said Colamatteo visited him June 11 at the home, 712 S. Hi Lusi in the suburb, and told him:

"Payne, I'm going to bury you politically and jobwise."

Payne, a public relations executive, said Colamat-teo also vowed to try to make him "look bad" and added:

"You are being followed and will be followed. You'd better keep your tracks."

PAYNE said Colamat-teo asked him June 11 at his Chicago office last Tuesday to discuss Payne's opposition to the club.

PAYNE said he took this to an "officer of the crime and wore the ring.

no, I never need
a liquor license."

PAYNE found himself on the edge of terror after he stood up at a Mount Prospect village board meeting to oppose a liquor license application for the club because of Colamatteo's background.

"I would be foolish if I said
I wasn't afraid," he said. "On the other hand, you only die once."

COLamatteo, 39, a self-styled tax consultant and auditor and head of the Colmar Agency, 6248 W. North, has drawn the interest of U.S. taxmen and the Senate rackets committee in the past.

Two months ago, a federal grand jury indicted him for evading $23,000 in taxes in 1954. In 1955 he had to pay back taxes on $115,000 in unreported income.

His 1956-58 finances were being probed when businessman Edmund A. Jewzik, 50, was murdered on the way to confer with U.S. taxmen.

Jewzik was then president of the $5,000,000 Harlem-Irving Shopping Center, of which Co-lamatteo was an officer. Government officials were interested in the source of $300,000
Colamatteo and a Michael Mar-ese invested in the center.

Jewzik recovered from the shooting and is now reported in Honolulu.

COlamatteo was a partner with Fred Tompkins and box Smith, 45, in the Curve Lounge, 800 Rush, which reportedly has been frequented by North Side syndicate hoodlums.

He also was involved in a Milwaukee auto agency that went bankrupt. The agency's assets included a $35,000 loan to Salvatore Vermeil, member of the notorious Detroit Purple gang.

Colamatteo reputedly was a leader in finding money to buy the country club from Richard Haft, playboy friend of syndicate hoodlums.

This is the background Payne settled in opposing a liquor license for the club, incorporated under the name M-P Country Club Inc.

THE FIRM has filed a suit in Superior Court to compel issuance of a liquor license and demanding $500,000 damages against several village officials.
UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT—
What was the $7,000 question? Army Pvt. Richard Hauff, playboy and associate of syndicate hoods, flew here Tuesday from his Texas post to fight a $34,000 federal "tax claim" in connection with sale of his million dollar Mount Prospect Country club. Hauff contended the tax claim was $7,000 too high. But before the court hearing, Hauff sidled up to an internal revenue agent, and whispered a question. The agent whispered an answer. Hauff then told his lawyer the $34,000 was okay. Hauff, his lawyer, and the agent would not disclose the Q. and A.
USC DOCTOR'S CREDIT CARD

Playboy Hauff Seized On Forgery Charge

Richard Hauff, Chicago playboy turned Army private, was arrested in Los Angeles Sunday. He was charged with forgery in connection with the use of a credit card bearing the name of an Arlington Heights doctor.

Hauff, 26, was arrested with a woman companion and a mess sergeant from Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., where Hauff has been stationed since he was drafted last Oct. 31.

Los Angeles police said Hauff and Mrs. Elaine Susan Russo, 20, occupied adjoining suites in a hotel there under the names of Dr. and Mrs. Gustav Soltz, of 1430 N. State, Arlington Heights.

Asserts Card Loaned
Under questioning by police, Hauff said Soltz had loaned him the credit card to use in Los Angeles. He said the Mrs. Russo and the mess sergeant, Homer E. Biddlecome, 34, had flown to that city to look into buying income property there.

Hauff controlled the Mount Prospect Country Club until creditors besieged him to pay debts run up during the two years of his tenure. The club was declared bankrupt Aug. 15.

Several Groups Bid
Several groups have reportedly been bidding for control of the million-dollar club, including one reputedly backed by Fred Tom Smith, a racketeer and associate of Anthony J. (Tony) Accardo.

Another group reportedly interested is made up of doctors from a Northwest suburb.

A federal bankruptcy referee is scheduled to rule on the fate of the club next Monday. Dr. Soltz was not available for comment Sunday night.

Hauff was born in Iran and was brought to this country 15 years ago by Franklin K. Hauff, 924 Highland, Arlington Heights, who was stationed in Iran during the War.